ABSTRACT

A pause over the last century is in order. We need to collectively re-evaluate the conditions for managed capital growth in the coming years. Given the immense advances in technology and market conditions over the preceding century, there remains a need to identify not just the best practices for capital management, but new avenues for its enrichment.

This project attempts to demonstrate concrete and viable avenues for capital growth which are deliberately intended to exceed market norms by orders of magnitude, with concomitant protections – not only for the safety of principal, but the safety of Principals.
